Article 1

Don't you wake up every morning with questions like

- What should I wear?
- What should I eat?
- Where should I party?
- Where should I go for a holiday?
- What should I buy?

There are thousands of decisions we take daily and its astounding the find the number of decisions that revolve around products and services. This is the amount we are dependent on brands and service providers to deliver. If you invest a few minutes to think about it, the result would be an endless chain of products, services and life decisions - many of which are made without much thought.

Have you ever wondered how it would be if firms didn't care what customers wanted and just produced goods for the sake of production? You would just end up with a set of firms selling goods that no one wants to buy and a set of consumers with needs no one fulfils. Therefore, we need that superhero that bridges the gap, the guy who caters for the customer and the guy who tells firms what is needed in the market - That guy called Marketing!

"Our jobs as marketers are to understand how the customer wants to buy and help them to do so." - Bryan Eisenberg

Marketing has acquired an important place not only in individual lives but also for the economic development of the whole country. It can achieve social welfare in the following ways:

Improving the standard of living:

A diverse society has many tastes and preferences and modern marketing has always aimed at satisfying customers. So, providing necessary goods and services at reasonable prices becomes a priority for marketing. Hence marketing improves the standard of living by catering to the needs of various segments of society.
